Reflects Pioneer Spirit of Its People

IT'S INTERESTING TO NOTE how people invariably seek information about any college or university. Typical questions which come to University of Nebraska are: How big is it? Is it co-educational? Of how many colleges is it composed?

The answers to such questions are supposed to give you a notion of what kind of school it is—and, in a measure, they do—but they fall short of telling the story of a University like that in Nebraska.

University of Nebraska is co-educational and it has a normal enrollment of approximately 7,000. "Normal" should be in quotes because immediately following World War II, Nebraska's student population swelled to nearly 12,000.

Nebraska has these colleges, agriculture, arts and sciences, business administration, dentistry, pharmacy, engineering and architecture, graduate, law, medicine, and teachers, plus schools of social work, nursing, journalism, and fine arts. These colleges and schools are located on three campus areas, two in Lincoln, the city campus and the college of agriculture, and the third in Omaha, the college of medicine. In addition, several related units are about the state, such as the preparatory school at Curtis which emphasizes farm and ranch training.

Agriculture is of utmost importance to Nebraska and the thinking of an agrarian society is reflected in the University. Its football team bears the name Cornhuskers. It is easier to understand its University if you first understand something of the people who dreamed of its founding.

In early rush of Western settlement, Nebraska was a "home" only to the Indians. Years before the Kansas-Nebraska territory was opened to settlement in 1854, the Oregon, California, and Mormon settlers passed through Nebraska up the broad Platte Valley.

After settlement opened and the rush of speculators subsided, most of the people who came to Nebraska sought homes on the rich prairie land. These were folk who wanted opportunity for their children and this meant education and establishment of a University as evidence of progress.

Many efforts failed but Nebraska University was chartered in 1869, year of the first Nebraska state legislature, and opened its doors two years later to five freshmen, two sophomores, and one junior.

Years of drought, grasshoppers, and hardtimes as well as prosperous eras left their reflection on the University. It prospered and progressed as did the State and by producing outstanding graduates and conducting research the University has meant much in gradual improvement of Nebraska life.

Nebraska farms and ranches are better today because of leadership provided by the college of agriculture. Nebraska's industrial progress in recent years has been outstanding, attributable to the University's directing attention to need for multiple sources of wealth.

Nebraska is not a school comprised of so many buildings or so many teachers. It is a school born of a genuine pioneer determination, a good University to serve the needs of a people who still marvel at the bounty of the soil and respect the abilities of each new generation that comes from it.

Robert Wherry is starting his second year as student field director of Block "O". In addition to being an outstanding student, Wherry has found time to excel in dramatics, student organizations and service groups. Wherry is a member of Strollers and Scarlet Mask, serving as president of the latter. Wherry coordinates the stunts while the block is in action.

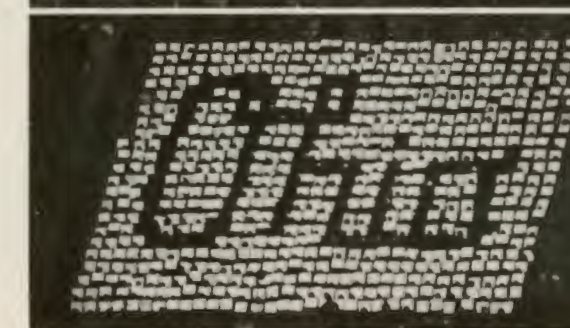

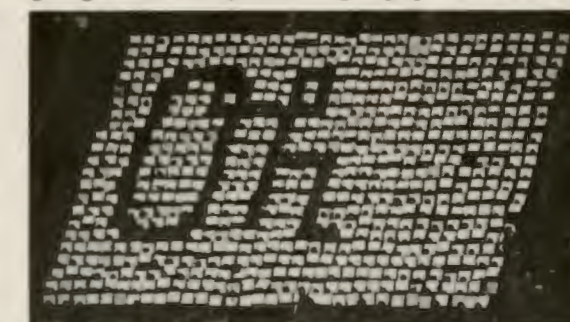

BOB WHERRY
Field Director

THIS is the second year for the student flash card section, Block "O", which is under the supervision of John Nitschke, student director. The block now has come into its own as one of the largest and best-coordinated flash card sections in college circles.

The 1955 section consists of 800 students who do the flipping of multi-colored cards to form many intricate designs and slogans seen at every home football game. The 800 students are supported by 200 alternates who form the frame for a pictorial view seen in Section 13A. The Block "O" also has 10 standing committees which do everything from designing stunts to purchasing equipment.

Ohio State Salutes STUDENT SAFETY PATROL

OHIO State University today salutes the 3,000 Franklin County members of the School Safety Patrol who are seated in the south bleachers of the stadium.

The boys and girls are guests of the Columbus Automobile Club and the University.

Members of the Patrol are selected for their aptitude, dependability, interest in their task popularity with their fellow students and scholastic standing. There are more than 550,000 boys and girls in 14,000 communities throughout the country who protect the lives of 12,500,000 class-mates.

Because of the School Safety Patrol, safety education and other safety activities, the traffic accident fatality rate for children between 5 and 14 has decreased 30 per cent in the last 25 years.

The functions of the Patrol are to instruct, direct and control members of the student body in crossing streets and highways at or near streets and to assist teachers and parents in the instruction of school children in safety practices and in the use of streets and highways at all times and places.

Special awards are made to members in the form of meritorious service pins, merit award medals and patrol lifesaver medals given for exceptional accomplishments while on duty.

Ohio State Says "Thanks!"

OHIO State University takes this opportunity to thank the many football fans who contributed $7,000 to the United State Olympic Fund during the last few months.

The money will be used to help defray expenses of the American squad to the Winter Games in Cortina, Italy, in January, 1956, and to the Outdoor Games in Melbourne, Australia, Nov. 22-Dec. 8, 1956.

The United States is one of the few nations participating in the Olympics which is not state-supported. Eighty per cent of the participants will be college athletes.

The amount required to transport the squads, which will travel by air, is $1,200,000.

The U. S. Olympic team is YOUR TEAM.

Features the north side of the main entrance to the Ohio State University campus. Program covers feature campus scenes, taken by members of the University photographic department with 5x7 view cameras.

Meet The Cornhuskers

AFTER an Orange Bowl appearance against Duke last New Year's Day, the University of Nebraska Cornhuskers are back to building again. . . . Coach Bill Glassford figured it wouldn't take long to find out whether the 1955 structure will stand or fall. . . . After meeting Hawaii in the opener at home he figured the rugged test against Ohio State's Rose Bowl champions would quickly tell the story.

LEROY BUTHERUS

half; Willie Greenlaw, right half and John Edwards, fullback, are listed with the first string. . . . Rex Fischer at quarterback is a senior but has not lettered. . . . Injuries have hampered him in both of his previous seasons.

Return of George Cifra from military service will bolster the fullback slot. . . . Cifra is from Turtle Creek, Pa. . . . Bill Hawkins, freshman numeral winner in 1952, is also returning from a tour of duty with the armed services. . . . A fullback in high school, Hawkins played end as a freshman but may be switched to tackle this fall. . . . He has matured in his absence and now weighs more than 200 pounds.

Coach Glassford called the spring practice "the best we've had since I came to Nebraska." . . . Glassford came to Nebraska in 1949.

Willie Greenlaw, Portland, Me., a right halfback, averaged 7.3 yards on 58 carries in 1954. . . . A junior, Willie also punts and passes. . . . A deceptive runner—he's moving faster than he appears to be—and fine balance have aided Willie's offensive maneuvers. . . . He came out of places that appeared to be securely locked as a sophomore.

Greenlaw was one of the top pitchers for the baseball team. . . . A southpaw, he won 4 and lost 2, with an earned run average of 2.27.

Don Erway, second string quarterback, is also a two-sport athlete. . . . He is a catcher in baseball. . . . Erway has been having knee troubles. . . . An operation on one knee did not bring the full cure hoped for, as it appears to be an arthritic condition. . . . In warm weather Erway feels fine, but in cold weather he has troubles.

Robert Berguin, first string center, has what the coaches call "football sense". . . . Berguin is the barrel type at 6-0 and 200 pounds. . . . A junior, he played center and guard and was picked as an All-State and All-America prep choice at Washington High, Sioux Falls, S.D.

BILL TAYLOR

Nebraska lost 14 lettermen and retained 14 for the 1955 campaign. . . . Coach Glassford was credited with one of the top quotes of the 1954 season after the Cornhuskers had gone down to a 55-7 defeat. . . . For a quarter and a half it had been a rough, tough ball game. . . . Then the roof fell in. . . . "It was like opening a bottle of olives," Coach Glassford said. . . . The first one comes out a bit hard, but after that they all come tumbling out."

Bill Orwig, University of Nebraska athletic director, is a native of Ohio, as is Coach Glassford. . . . Orwig was born in Toledo, New Year's Day, 1907. . . . Glassford was born at Lancaster, Ohio, and played high school football there, attending University of Pittsburgh in 1934-'35-'36.

Leo Scherer, reserve halfback, works as a sports-writer in his spare time. . . . He can play either left or right halfback. . . . Leo's dad was one of Nebraska great ends in the early 20's when the Huskers walloped Notre Dame and the Four Horsemen two years straight.

This marks the first football game between Ohio State and Nebraska, but schedules call for a return of the Huskers again in 1956.
